Help! Stuck on the CTA without air conditioning

TRANSIT DIARIES

Rianne Coale

» rcoale@redeye
chicago.com
» @RianneCoale

There are SO many things you can do in Chicago during the summer months. Go to the beach, enjoy a leisurely walk through Millennium Park, suffer miserably on an overheated bus or train—just to name a few.

On the hottest days of the year, there’s about a 50-50 chance (unscientifically speaking) you’ll be forced to suffer through a ride in a mobile hot box that is the CTA when the air conditioning isn’t working.

As soon as you shuffle your way on, it’s immediately apparent you’ve made a horrible mistake. A wave of heat washes over you and sucks the breath from your lungs, but by that point it’s too late. You’re stuck—Dutch-oven’d in the festering stench of unwashed pits and days-old urine while your sweat beads on areas of your body you didn’t know could sweat.

It’s truly awful, and many (if not all of us) have likely had to endure this at least once. Many people have taken to Twitter to complain about not having air conditioning on their CTA commutes.

I called the organization to find out why it happens, who controls it and what passengers can do to avoid the dreaded traveling ovens.

“Our entire fleet of buses and rail cars have air-conditioned service through the summer months,” CTA spokesman Jeff Tolman said. “They go through a preseason inspection and are inspected daily before each shift to make sure everything is working properly.”

The operator of the vehicle does not control the temperature inside it. I’d venture to guess, that on a bus at least, they are just as miserable as you if the AC unit craps out.

“The air temp is automatically controlled by a thermostat,” Tolman said. “On a hot day, the operator can turn the air conditioning on to cool off the cars, but the temperature is regulated by a thermostat.”

Tolman suggested that if you notice the air conditioning not working in your rail car, notify the operator via the call button. Or you can call the customer service center, just make sure you note the vehicle or route number and time of day.

“If the air conditioner malfunctions and is isolated to a single rail car, the operator may not know immediately,” he said. “In many cases, [the operator] can re-set the system on the spot. If the unit isn’t working in a specific car, the car will be taken out of service at end of the route to be repaired.”

There have been times when it’s a bazillion degrees outside and it feels like the air conditioner is blowing heat. HEAT, of all things! It might be caused by a broken AC unit.

“The air conditioner may not be blowing cool air but instead be circulating air that is already in the rail car, so in a rail car with a bunch of people and with the sun beating in, it could feel like it’s blowing warm air,” Tolman said.

That makes sense, but it doesn’t make it any more pleasant. Just know you’re not alone when you find yourself trapped in the insufferable sauna stank of the CTA, wringing the moisture from your sweat-soaked blouse or button-up upon arrival at your destination.

Sigh. There’s nothing like summer in the city, amirite?

“The operator of the vehicle does not control the temperature inside it. I’d venture to guess, that on a bus at least, they are just as miserable as you if the AC unit craps out.”

Cubbies Believe It or Not!

STRANGE INJURIES, SLUGFESTS, WORLD SERIES EXPECTATIONS ... THE CUBS CAN'T SHAKE THE WEIRD

By Andy Frye | FOR REDEYE

The Cubs are roaring through the regular season, and soon the moniker "best team in baseball" might sound oddly like a cliché.

Consider the context: The normal course of business for the club is made up of April rains, May malaise, June swoons and being "Completely Useless By September."

But not in 2016. Now it's four-game win streaks, no-hitters, wins by five or more runs or crushing the Reds 16-0 on a Thursday night.

Is there a full moon, or something in the water? Historically speaking, the Cubs may be less predictable, less run-of-the-mill than people think.

If the Cubs were a mutual fund, its current performance would be considered legendary, and everyone would be jumping in. To cynics, the good times would indicate insider trading or symptoms of a Ponzi scheme.

Yet if you look through history—economic or otherwise—the Cubs are anything but a dose of normal, boring baseball.

Tricky business?

You probably knew the day he was hired that manager Joe Maddon wasn't your average, boring guy. To prove that, he called up new personnel to the dugout after a five-game losing streak in June 2015.

It wasn't an arm or flashy new hitter from Triple-A. Instead, Las Vegas magician Simon Winthrop met the Cubs on a road trip in New York, performing tricks and illusions before their next game. Following Winthrop's show, the Cubs swept the Mets, with two shutouts and a 6-1 win.

Whether Maddon's magician lifted a losing spell or simply the Cubs' spirits is up to the audience to decide. Now if someone could just make the sting of that sweep in the NL Championship Series go away.

Wrigley wind or Philly physics?

Baseball fans know Wrigley Field is no stranger to brisk winds. Then again, maybe the Philadelphia Phillies bring a zephyr of attitude

“I THINK [CUBS MANAGER] JOE MADDON IS A GENIUS. THE WAY HE KEEPS THESE GUYS LOOSE BUT STILL CONTINUES TO GET QUALITY WORK IN EVERY DAY IN SPRING TRAINING IS AMAZING. I HAD NEVER BEEN A PART OF A SPRING TRAINING LIKE THAT, AND I SURE WISH I HAD.”

—Kerry Wood, retired Cubs pitcher who spent a couple weeks with the team in spring training mous fan, Steve Bartman, shares whereabouts unknown with the likes of Jimmy Hoffa and The Roanoke Colony.

What starts weird ends well

Some say success starts early in the preseason. Despite an underwhelming 11-19 record in the 2016 Cactus League, spring training had other highlights.

Besides usual, not-weird daily workouts, Cubs players were visited by baby bear cubs while also spending one warmup session serenaded by a solo electric guitarist. Also this March, one practice was led by mimes. Perhaps all the better for silencing critics.

Wood also spent a couple of weeks with the team at spring training. Despite leaving Mesa impressed, he said he's still surprised with the Cubs' start to the season.

“I think [Cubs manager] Joe Maddon is a genius,” Wood told the Tribune recently. “The way he keeps these guys loose but still continues to get quality work in every day in spring training is amazing.

“I had never been a part of a spring training like that, and I sure wish I had.”

Better management = better returns

If you think it's weird that the Cubs are winning, are in first place by a comfortable margin or have a 100-plus run differential, get used to it. Maybe it's no anomaly, just a new methodology.

Back to that mutual fund analogy. My old finance professor used to say, “Past performance is not necessarily indicative of future results.” Same goes for baseball, perhaps. Read your prospectus, and enjoy the daily numbers.

ANDY FRYE IS A REDEYE CONTRIBUTOR. @MYSPORTSCOMPLEX or a feisty East Coast draft that gets the ball jumping.

Either way, the Windy City lived up to its nickname on May 17, 1979, when the Cubs-Phillies matchup produced a showstopper with 50 total hits and 45 runs. The day's tally included 11 home runs, including two by Philly Hall of Famer Mike Schmidt and three by Cubs outfielder Dave Kingman.

Named “the holy grail of high scoring games” by the New York Times, this weird, windy game went 10 innings and ended with Philadelphia grabbing a 23-22 win.

That game is rivaled only by a Cubs-Phillies matchup in August 1922. That game went to the Cubs, 26-23, after 51 hits and nine errors. It's also the major league record for combined runs scored in one game.

Seriously, that's how you got hurt?

Strange doesn't stop at the baseline or even in fans' long-tormented hearts. Sure, sports injuries come in all forms, but the Cubs' stars have a knack for the peculiar.

In 2004, outfielder Sammy Sosa once got put on the disabled list after sneezing. Sosa's sneezure resulted in a sprained ligament in his back.

However, pitchers lead the way. Odd off-field injuries include Kyle Farnsworth's knee after he kicked an electric fan out of frustration (also in 2004), and Kerry Wood slipping while getting out of a hot tub and landing on his chest and stomach (in 2007). And don't forget Carlos Zambrano's elbow injury from too much computer time (in 2005).

No, don't get up

Likewise, the Cubs have as much luck with chairs as they do with billy goats. Former Cubs left-hander Mike Remlinger was put on the disabled list in 2005 after breaking a finger because it got “stuck” between two recliners. Going for gusto, Derrek Lee tweaked his back after a clubhouse chair collapsed under him during spring training in 2010.

(In)famous fans

It could be our character, our taste in cheap beer or our coping skills, but the Cubs are also known for the goodness of their fans. Maybe not famous ones, though.

Arguably the Yankees' most famous fan, Billy Crystal, has hosted the Oscars nine times and won six Emmys and a Tony award. Famed Astros fan George H.W. Bush was the nation's 41st president.

Instead of sharing the mantle of celebrity with Crystal or Bush 41, the Cubs' most fa-

Gasol could skip Olympics due to Zika virus concerns

Associated Press

Pau Gasol is considering not playing at the Olympics because of the Zika virus.

The Spanish basketball player said Monday that there is too much uncertainty about the situation in Brazil and that anyone going to Rio de Janeiro for the games should “think about” whether it’s worth the risk.

The Chicago Bulls player said other Spanish athletes have also expressed their concerns about the virus and are also considering skipping the games.

“It wouldn’t surprise me to see some athletes deciding not to participate in the games to avoid putting their health and the health of their families at risk,” Gasol said, adding that he was among the athletes making such considerations.

“I’m thinking about [whether or not to go],” he said. “Just like every athlete, or any other person considering going to Rio, should be thinking about it.”

Brazil has been badly hit by Zika, the mosquito-borne virus linked to severe birth defects and possible neurological problems in adults.

Gasol said officials involved in the games must come forward with “more clear information” about the risks athletes could be facing if they decide to compete in Rio.

Later Monday, the Spanish Olympic committee released a statement that included updated recommendations from the World Health Organization regarding the virus, saying “every member” of its delegation should be aware of them. The committee said it has been constantly relaying to the federations the information it receives from health authorities and the International Olympic Committee.

Gasol mentioned the call from 150 health specialists to consider postponing or moving the Aug. 5-21 Olympics, something the WHO rejected last week.

“We need to understand the seriousness of the situation,” Gasol said. “Even though there are some soothing words being said, we know that there are different opinions about the subject.”

Gasol said he is being proactive and has been trying to gather as much information as possible about the virus and the risks it could pose for himself and his family. He said he has contacted experts in the area to try to know more about the virus.

“I feel responsible to know more about the situation and to inform everyone about it,” he said. “It’s important to talk openly about this. It’s a very delicate situation.”

Gasol helped Spain win the silver medal at both the 2008 and 2012 Olympics.

Taking it to the Max

'SAVED BY THE BELL' POP-UP DINER SAVED BY THE MAX OPENS JUNE 1 IN WICKER PARK

By Heather Schroering | REDEYE

There's no spandex tight enough nor hair permed enough for what's about to happen in Wicker Park with the Wednesday opening of Saved by the Max, the pop-up diner based on "Saved by the Bell" in the former Geek Bar space (1941 W. North Ave.). We hope you're hungry for some AC sliders—we've got menu details.

Made up of elevated diner staples—burgers, mac 'n' cheese, biscuits and gravy, a BLT—the menu was created by former Schwa chef de cuisine Brian Fisher. Fisher said he was given a broad template to start with when he entered the project, but when he was building the menu, he was thinking, "When I go to a diner, what do I want to eat?"

From Mac & Screech mac 'n' cheese ($8) to Mr. Dewey's honey buttermilk biscuits and gravy ($13), the dishes boast clever names and are a cut above standard diner fare. The Snow White & the Seven Dorks ($10) appetizer is a spin on chicken wings with a Lebanese spice blend served with herb yogurt. Fisher said he's excited about Tori's fried chicken ($14), featuring Korean fried chicken atop a waffle made with Goose Island 312 and coconut milk and drizzled with spiced maple syrup.

"The Max [from 'Saved by the Bell'] was in Los Angeles, and the best place in the world to get Korean food is in L.A.," Fisher said. "I thought it was a fitting tribute to the city that makes the best Korean food."

The dessert menu includes Hey, Hey, Hey pie of the day ($6) from Bang Bang Pie Shop, a hot fudge sundae ($6) and two other items from Acadia pastry chef Mari Katsumura. The beverage menu, by Geek Bar alumnus Rob Stein, is made up of plays on classic cocktails—negroni, manhattan, B Ba B Ba Balooody Mary and more ($8–$12)—and non-boozy floats, shakes and fizzes, such as Cream for a Day ($6), a dangerously delicious float with vanilla ice cream, salted peach puree, tropical Red Bull Yellow, cream and club soda. There's also Goose Island beer on draft and in bottles and cans ($4–$16).

Stepping into Saved by the Max is like being in a timewarp back to the '90s set: blue and red sparkly vinyl-upholstered booths, a compact disc jukebox, neon lights and zigzags and squiggle accents in every direction. On display is a real menu from the set that highlights items such as an avocado turkey burger, a garden burger and a hot fudge sundae. Guests can even sit in Principal Belding's office, complete with wood paneling, report card file cabinet and a framed photograph of his child's birth (screenshot straight from the "Earthquake" episode).

Saved by the Max is open daily from 5–11 p.m. for dinner (mostly by reservation, but there's limited space for walk-ins) and late-night walk-in service from 11 p.m.–1 a.m. (2 a.m. on Saturdays). Weekends include brunch (10 a.m.–3 p.m.) on Saturday and Sunday. The pop-up runs through August, and while most reservations are completely booked, check back on savedbythemax.com to see if any open up.

Gemini May 21-June 20

You might feel like staying far away from your partner in order to avoid dealing with your current relationship reality. However, you'll need to face whatever it is you want to avoid most. You know what you have to look at. Open your eyes.

Cancer June 21-July 22

If you're pining away for someone you know you can't have or shouldn't be with, this week might be upsetting. The bubble in your romantic fantasy land is likely to burst. Ask yourself why you spend so much effort on a love story that isn't real. Genuine love is available to you, but first it's time to confront your fears.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

A budding romance between you and a friend might turn into chaos. If you are uncertain about your feelings, or if you suspect your pal is second-guessing your recent hook-up, take a step back. Eventually you might realize that your feelings are genuine, but this week, you'll be too mashed up with confusion.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Your partner might disappoint you this week. He or she might not be there for you as you celebrate a career achievement while also having to navigate a stressful domestic situation. Don't sweep your frustration under the rug because you're afraid to confront the wrinkles in your love connection. Iron them out.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 22

You might have too many stars in your eyes when it comes to the romantic potential between you and someone you recently met. If your feelings are growing quickly, you might want to make sure that this person is accurately portraying him or herself. Don't fall in love with an illusion.

Scorpio Oct. 23-Nov. 21

You might be crushed to learn that your partner made a financial decision without your consent that impacts you both. These financial omissions could have serious consequences on your ability to trust each other. Address it immediately.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

You might suddenly wake up to realize that your sweetheart isn't perfect after all, and that you have a few significant issues to work through. This dose of disappointment combined with a reality check may have a lot to do with a family matter you're dealing with. If you feel unfairly burdened, it might be time to voice your frustration to your mate.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

The current state of your love life requires attention. If there's anything bothering you connected to your relationship that you've been avoiding, it might manifest as a health concern now. Emotional distress can lead to physical ailments under any circumstances, but this week it appears that feeling unwell physically will be directly related to unresolved stress between you and your mate. Work it out before that stomachache turns into something more.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

You might feel as if you just woke up from a magical romantic fairy tale only to realize that all along you've been kissing a frog. Even if you are still content in your current love connection, there might be some trouble to work out connected to your sweetheart or a friend. Someone might be withholding information.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

If you and your partner are in the midst of a home decorating project or renovation, it might be difficult to agree on anything. Your tastes will either run completely opposite, or your budgeting preferences will not match up. If possible, put any major home-related decisions on hold this week. The two of you need to figure out how to compromise without one of you feeling as if you're making the ultimate sacrifice.

Aries March 21-April 19

Words you hear from your partner this week might be laced with falsehood. Even if it's a lie of omission meant to protect you from something, it's still a lie. And this week you might be disheartened to learn that your lover would go to such great lengths to withhold information. This might not be a deal-breaker in your relationship, but if you don't address it, then the trust you have will begin to erode.

Taurus April 20-May 20

Your partner might leave you feeling as if you'll never see eye to eye on decisions related to money. In fact, you might make a discovery this week about how your partner handles money that you feel is extremely detrimental to your relationship. Your security buttons are bound to be pushed this week. Handle with care.

Emilia Clarke as Daenerys Stormborn of House Targaryen, the first of her name, the Unburnt, Queen of Meereen, Queen of the Andals, the Rhoynar and the First Men, Lord of the Seven Kingdoms, Protector of the Realm, Khaleesi of the Great Grass Sea, Breaker of Chains and Mother of Dragons

THE QUOTE

"I have a lot of unrealized dreams. I would love to play Jane Bond. My ultimate leading man would be Leonardo DiCaprio. No doubt about it."

—Emilia Clarke, in an interview with the UK's Daily Star. Guys, we're totally in for this.

'Find a friend'

Melissa McCarthy has some words for the people who are claiming the new "Ghostbusters" film is ruining their childhood. McCarthy told The Guardian, "Four women doing any movie on earth will destroy your childhood? I have a visual of those people not having a Ben [Falcone, her husband], not having friends, so they're just sitting there and spewing hate into this fake world of the internet. I just hope they find a friend." Seriously, you guys. Get over it.

THE DIGIT

$4.15M

That's how much money it would cost you to own the "Full House" home. The famous "painted lady" that was used for exterior shots of the Tanners' house is up for sale in San Francisco, according to thr.com. Did you love "Full House"? Do you love "Fuller House"? Do you have that much money? Cool, then a piece of pop culture can be all yours!

'X-Men' wins a disappointing weekend

"X-Men: Apocalypse" won the weekend, pulling in $65 million at the domestic box office, but still underperforming compared with other movies in the franchise, according to vulture.com. Also coming in below expectations was "Alice Through the Looking Glass." According to Vulture, the sequel earned $28.1 million and is on track to make less than $100 million. Yikes. Maybe finally people are just sick and tired of [bleep] sequels.

Why the hate?

Director John Carney had some choice words about Kiera Knightley. Carney, who wrote and directed "Begin Again," which starred Knightley, said that he doesn't plan on making movies with supermodels again after working with Knightley. According to thr.com, he said, "I like working with actors, and I wanted to come back to what I knew and enjoy filmmaking again—not that I didn't enjoy 'Begin Again,' but Keira has an entourage that follow her everywhere so it's very hard to get any real work done, and so I was very ready to come back to Ireland and make films that nobody cared about who was in it or any of that crap." He went on to praise her co-star Mark Ruffalo. Hey, John. Excuse us, John, but Knightley has been nominated twice for an Oscar, and she began acting as a child. Ummm, way to go.
